THE RENAISSANCE DISPUTE.
Durand-Ruel Disavows the Drawings in Question.

In regard to the controversy over the genuineness of the Renai drawings now on view in the Anderson Galleries and to be sold there April 16, George Durand-Ruel, of the firm Durand-Ruel, New York and Paris, writes to THE SUN and NEW YORK HERALD to take exception to the statement of C. Lewis Hind that "neither Mr. Pierre Renai nor Mr. Durand-Ruel, nor the editor of the Bulletin de la Vie Artistique has seen these thirty-three sketches and studies by Renai."

Mr. Durand-Ruel says: "I have seen them and know enough about the work of Renai to consider these sketches and studies as not being by him. It was easy for Mr. Pierre Renai or anybody acquainted with Renai's paintings to form a similar opinion just by looking at the reproductions in the catalogue."
